Italy's Power Is Boasted of by Il Duce on Army Day

Force of Arms Is Great, But Italian Hearts Greater—Mussolini

POPE SEEKS PEACE

Vatican's Envoys in World Capitals Transmit New Appeal

ROME, Italy.—(AP)—Speaking in connection with a great Army day parade, Premier Mussolini declared Tuesday that Italy would prove the strength of her decisions "when the hour comes."

"The force of our arms is great, but still greater is the decision of our hearts, and when the hour comes we shall prove it," Il Duce told cheering troops and civilians.

He spoke briefly after a parade of armed strength that gave German military leaders a further opportunity to appraise the Fascist war machine which Mussolini has agreed to harness to German might in a military alliance.

Pope Pleads for Peace

VATICAN CITY, Rome, Italy.—(AP)—The Vatican City News service announced Tuesday that papal nuncios in various capitals were carrying to the heads of governments the pope's ardent desire for peace.

The news service said Pope Pius XII, who always has interested himself in peace, did so today "more than ever," furthering the cause of peace "through normal diplomatic contacts."

Dictators to Arbitrate

ROME, Italy.—(AP)—The Fascist press hinted Monday that Chancellor Hitler and Premier Mussolini now were prepared to negotiate Europe's "open problems." Virginia Gayda, authoritative editor of Il Giornale d'Italia, often a spokesman for the Foreign Office, indicated that readiness of the Rome-Berlin axis to negotiate was a result of the projected pact of Milan, agreed upon over the week-end.

The new German-Italian military and political alliance was described by Gayda as a "counter-balance to the British-French front," furthering the aim of achieving a balance by the weight of their combined military, economic and political resources. Germany and Italy now were ready to negotiate, he suggested, the "open problems" included those at Danzig and Pomerania between Germany and Poland, and Italy's claims against France.

General Center

Italy's army leaders met Monday night with Premier Mussolini to discuss military matters. They considered steps recently taken to speed up the organization of frontier forces.

Gayda warned that "peaceableness" of the axis policy at this time must not be taken as a sign Europe's "open problems" should be shelved, but on the contrary they should be settled without delay if future trouble were to be averted.

Foreign diplomats interpreted the Milan pact in its immediate aspect as a brake on German aspirations in Eastern Europe, and thus they saw tension diminished over Danzig. But they were doubtful concerning long-range possibilities of the new German-Italian alliance.

The Fascist press generally acclaimed the Milan alliance as having confounded the British and French. "French-British hegemony in Europe is finished forever," Il Lavoro Fascista said.

Diplomats speculated on the possibilities of the Milan alliance being extended to include a military tie-up with Japan. Many doubted that Italy and Germany would make military commitments so far away from home and thought that if they sign up with Japan the accord would be much looser than a union merely between Berlin and Rome.

Sham Battle Held

Premier Mussolini Monday showed the chief of staff of the German army, Colonel-General von Brauchitsch, a sample of what his fighting men can do in a sham battle at Cesare di Roma, 20 miles from the capital. Il Duce will present von Brauchitsch and other visiting German officers another display tomorrow when 20,000 men and large amount of the most modern machinery of war parade in Rome's Army Day celebrations.

A BUREAU MERGER

Departments of Commerce and Agriculture Main Ones Affected

WASHINGTON.—(AP)—President Roosevelt proposed a second government reorganization plan to congress Tuesday, involving inter-departmental bureau transfers and consolidations estimated to save $1,250,000.

The first plan, involving merger of a score of independent lending, welfare and public works agencies into three new federal agencies, becomes effective June 24 because a veto of the resolution failed of passage in the house yesterday.

The second plan's proposals include: Abolition of the National Bituminous Coal Commission, and transfer of its functions to the Secretary of the Interior.

Transfer of the foreign commerce service of the Department of Commerce, and the foreign agricultural service of the Department of Agriculture, to the Department of State for consolidation with that department's foreign service.

Transfer to the Department of Agriculture of the Rural Electrification Administration, now independent.

Transfer of the inland waterways corporation from the Department of War to the Department of Commerce.

Transfer to the new Federal Security Agency, proposed in reorganization plan No. 1, for administration, in the office of education, the film and radio functions of the National Emergency Council.

Abolition of the National Emergency Council and transfer of all its functions, except film and radio activities, to the president.

Transfer to the Department of the Interior of the bureau of fisheries, from the Department of Commerce, and the biological survey, from the Department of Agriculture.

65 Students to Be Graduated in Hope This School Year

Commencement Exercises at Saenger Theater May 28

GRADUATE JUNE 1ST

Elementary Schools to Close May 19—9 Months for High School

The Hope School Board in its regular session Monday night, voted the closing date of all schools in the city, with the exception of the High School as of May 19.

The budget for the year 1938-39 was set up for an eight-month term for the elementary schools. Because of the increase in sales tax collections, the board has been able to extend all schools to eight and one-half months, with the high school running the full nine months.

This will enable high school students to get in their full 180 days required by the standardizing agency of the North Central association.

Commencement Sunday will be May 28, and services will be held at the Saenger theater at 11:15 o'clock. This hour will enable those who attend Sunday school at different churches of the city to get in their full hour of school worship.

The sermon this year will be preached by Rev. Kenneth L. Spore, pastor of First Methodist church.

Graduating exercises will be held on the high school campus on Thursday evening, June 1. Senator James H. Pilkinton will make the address to the class.

This year's class is comprised of 65 students. Of this number, 27 are boys and 38 are girls. Sybil Burke is president of the class.

T. B. Campaign Completed Here

Hempstead Chairman Expresses Thanks for Co-operation

Miss Hattie Anne Feild, Hempstead county chairman of the Early Diagnosis Campaign of the Arkansas Tuberculosis Association announced Tuesday the completion of the campaign.

Miss Feild wishes to thank all committee members for their helpful support during the drive in Hempstead county.

Miss Feild stated that industry and business alike in Hope and Hempstead county expressed their willingness to assume their responsibility in cooperating with tuberculosis organizations through remainder of the year in an educational campaign to conquer tuberculosis.

The churches and schools also have united in this unselfish cause, the chairman said.

"Tuberculosis is no respecter of persons and its ravages are found among persons of all walks of life, young and old, of every race, class or creed," she said.

The ultimate purpose of the drive is the eradication of tuberculosis and the month of April was set aside as the particular period in which to call the attention of all citizens to the danger of this disease.

In saying that the drive is complete, the chairman does not wish to leave the impression that all has been done in the city and county that could be done to make this a safer place to live.

"There is still much work needed, Miss Feild stated, but we have during the past month made a small beginning. We wish to urge all members of every family to continue to watch their own health and to be on the look-out for the danger signals that indicate tuberculosis germs may be at work."

During the recent survey several new cases were located and efforts are now being made to give them proper medical attention in order that they may recover and that further spread of the disease may stop.

The public can assist each year by purchasing Tuberculosis Christmas Seals during the holiday season. It is the hope of the Hempstead county committee that this county next Christmas will far exceed its quota in seal sales.

$1,000 Needed for Scout Program

List of Donations Will Be Published Within Next 10 Days

The Hope district council of Boy Scouts decided at its meeting Monday night to publish a complete list of all contributors to scouting this year as soon as all solicitors have made their final reports. This list should be ready for publication in 10 days.

It requires about $1,000 a year to carry out a full scouting program efficiently in the Hope district and approximately half of this amount has been reported, however, a large per cent of the solicitors have not yet made a complete report on prospects they agreed to contact.

The council also decided to hold a Court of Honor the last week of school at the Oglesby school building if suitable arrangements can be made. It is hoped that if boys in the 4th, 5th and 6th grades are given the opportunity to see a scout Court of Honor where promotions and merit badges are conferred, this will create more interest in scouting.

Hammond Resigns as Local Pastor

Resignation to Become Effective on August 31

Rev. Vernon A. Hammond, for the past thirty-two months pastor of the First Christian church of this city, presented his resignation to that congregation at the close of the morning worship service Sunday, stating that he believed the church would make greater progress with a plan of reorganization and a ten-year program recently launched if it were under new pastoral leadership.

The newly constituted official board of the church at its meeting held at the church Monday night in a unanimous vote refused to accept the resignation, which Rev. Hammond had asked to become effective on August 31, four months hence, at the end of his third year in this pastorate. The board, with every member present, in refusing to accept the tendered resignation, voted to give Rev. Hammond a thirty-day vacation with pay, to be immediately effective.

Progress of Church

Rev. and Mrs. Vernon A. Hammond came to Hope from Leesville, La., to begin a pastorate at the First Christian church here on September 1, 1936. Under their leadership the congregation has prospered in every way, making a gain of more than twenty-five per cent in membership and becoming entirely free from indebtedness.

During school enrollment and attendance has more than doubled during the past three years. Many needed improvements have been made in the parsonage and church grounds and equipment.

During a two weeks' revival recently conducted by Rev. L. C. Leet of Texarkana the congregation was completely reorganized and new deacons and elders elected and ordained. Rev. Leet is making weekly visits to this city, advising and counseling the officials of the church as they shape up a new ten-year program, included in which is a much needed new building for the congregation.

Rev. and Mrs. Hammond have been well received by the entire city of Hope. They have taken an active part in the civic and cultural life of the city. Mrs. Hammond has served two years as secretary-treasurer of the Bay

Sees Adolph Hitler as a Changed Man

Fuehrer Becomes More Viennese—Dreams of Empire

The writer of this article describing the new Hitler has just been awarded the Pulitzer prize for distinguished foreign correspondence. A member of the AP's Berlin staff since 1924 and its chief since 1928, he has had an excellent opportunity to observe Hitler's career from its very start.

By LOUIS P. LOCHNER

BERLIN.—(AP)—The Adolf Hitler of January 30, 1933, when President Paul von Hindenburg asked him to form a cabinet, was very different from the Adolf Hitler of May, 1938, as he enters his fifties.

In 1933 he was essentially Prussian, a successor to the Hohenzollerns. Now, he is rather more Austrian, dreaming the dreams of a polyglot empire that the Hapsburgs lost.

The change has effected even his private life. In '33 he was a glutton for work, grivalling that inveterate midnight oil burner of the World War, the late General Erich Ludendorff. He could toil all day and most of the night.

Now he relaxes frequently, he is in his hide-out on top of the Kehlstein mountain, in his chalet above Berchtesgaden, in the Dreessen Hotel in Godesberg-on-the-Rhine, or even in busy Berlin.

When he assumed power in 1933, pompous Prussian military marches alternated with heavy Wagnerian operatic strains as Hitler's musical food. Today, snappy marches still resound wherever he shows himself in public; and he still hears "Der Reistersinger" and other masterpieces of Wagnerian art.

But Hitler's Aestrian descent now breaks through, as it were, and leads him to places where the lighter arts of dance and vaudeville and comic opera hold sway.

Miriam Verne and Marion Daniels, American dancers; Billy McKay and Eddy Laville, American acrobatic humorists are among the stars of the dance and vaudeville who have per-

MEET AGAIN 15TH

Selection of Superintendent, Faculty Fails on Monday Night

For the first time in the modern history of Hope the Board of Education found itself deadlocked Monday night on the question of re-electing the city superintendent.

Miss Beryl Henry, superintendent connected with the Hope school system for the last 21 years, was the only applicant. She was nominated for re-election, but the six-man board divided evenly, three to three.

Voting for Miss Henry were: J. P. Duffie, Robert M. LaGrone, Jr., and E. P. Young.

Voting against Miss Henry were: A. A. Albritton, C. E. Cassidy, and Clifford Franks.

The board, deadlocked over the question of a superintendent, was unable Monday night to proceed with the election of teachers for the new school year.

The board adjourned with the understanding it would meet again next Monday night, May 15, at 7:30 o'clock, to renew its attempt to elect a superintendent.

Cotton Proves to Be a Good Paving

Superior to Asphalt and Concrete as Airport Runway Material

FORT McLELLAN, Ala.—(AP)—Col. Simon B. Buckner Jr., commander, said Monday experimental cotton-paved runways at Reilly Field here had proved superior to ordinary asphalt and concrete runways.

The traffic-paved runways were laid last summer by U. S. army aviation experts, and have been tested through the extremes of a summer and winter weather.

At the time the lanes were put down, Representative Sam Hobbs (Dem., Ala.) declared general use of the cotton at military airports would provide an outlet for an additional million and a half to two million bales of cotton. Advised of the success of the experiment, Hobbs said he would press for widespread use of the fabric on government airfields.

The cotton cloth is used as a binder on asphalt runways. Laid on the regular base preparation, it knits with asphalt poured on top. It prevents lesions and waves in the asphalt. Concrete runways are more expensive, inclined to crack and lack the resiliency of asphalt, army men advised.

Crude Oil Rates From Lewisville Reduced

LITTLE ROCK, Ark.—(AP)—The Arkansas Corporation Commission Monday granted the Missouri Pacific, Cotton Belt and Rock Island railroads authority to reduce from 13 to six cents per hundred yards the rates on crude petroleum shipped from Lewisville to El Dorado for storage purposes.

Lack of storage facilities at Lewisville caused the commission to permit posting of the new tariff on one day's notice.

The commission set for hearing May 17 the application of the Southeast Arkansas Freight Line Inc., for authority to post a 15 cents per hundred pounds rate from El Dorado to Little Rock on petroleum products.

Look at the Substance; Forget the Word

Our political words are getting all scrambled. Some of them have come to mean practically nothing at all. When men understand widely different things by the same word, then that word is no longer of much value.

Two words ring in every ear today, and all day long. They are "democracy" and "dictatorship."

Are we all talking about the same thing when we use these words? Let's see.

Is it? Well the United States is not, never was, and never was intended to be, a pure democracy. It is a democratic republic.

The people govern themselves, but not directly. They are governed by popularly-chosen officials who have certain powers as long as they are in office. People can replace them with others if they don't like what is done. That is a republic, but it is not pure democracy.

Is Sweden a democracy? Of course not, we say. It is a monarchy. The king is head of the state, and he rules because his father ruled.

Yet in Sweden everything of importance is done by popularly-elected representatives of the people. The king walks about town or rides the trolleys like anybody else. And the Socialists think he's swell. In many ways Sweden is more democratic under the monarchy than France is under a republic.

Is Russia a democracy? It is a government set up and run by the members of a single party. They alone have power. They alone have right. That is a theory that works like this: A small party of highly trained people decide that the great bulk of the people are dopes, and unable to govern themselves.

So they say, "With the best motives in the world, and in behalf of those voiceless millions, we appoint ourselves their representatives. We will seize power and rule for them until some day they are able to do it themselves."

But your most rigid South American dictator always insists that he also is merely a trustee of the people's power, ruling for them until they are able to do it themselves.

So whenever we hear those words "democracy" and "dictatorship" today let's stop and ask ourselves, just what do we mean?

Better than either word today is "a free country." Every American has definitely asked the question, "Well, it's free country isn't it?" He knows what that means.

And the important thing about any country today is not "Is it a democracy?" or "A dictatorship?" or "A monarchy?" but "Is it free?"

Use of Gold in Treating Tuberculosis Encouraging First Time in 300 Years

In 1924, a Norwegian physician named Mollgaard experimented with a method of treating tuberculosis that involved the use of gold injected into the body.

For more than 1200 years gold had been used for treating all sorts of diseases, probably because the magic associated with the very word "gold" had great influence on people who were sick. For at least 300 years it had been tried repeatedly in treating tuberculosis and always discarded.

In 1920 some work was done which showed that sometimes the results following the use of gold were more harmful than beneficial to the patients.

Then the subject was received in 1924. A new preparation of gold was tried extensively in several important sanatoriums. The evidence more recently developed seemed to indicate that in some cases of tuberculosis the use of this gold preparation, in addition to other drugs, was helpful. Indeed, in a few instances the results were sufficiently good to cause doctors to continue their experiments.

However, in no case did the gold act so perfectly as to make the doctors believe it had specific effect on the germ that causes the disease.

It must be remembered that nowadays a person seriously sick from tuberculosis is likely to be given care in a sanatorium where he will get adequate rest, the use of artificial pneumothorax, or various operations on the diseased lung, good food, including the essential proteins, vitamins, and mineral salts, necessary to help the body in repair, and particularly good nursing.

At the same time, drugs are administered which stimulate the activity of the tissues. It is exceedingly difficult for the doctor who has charge of the patient to be certain where to assign the responsibility for the benefit that occurs.

Tuberculosis is seldom so severe that it destroys life suddenly. Usually it is a disease that comes on slowly, even insidiously; it progresses unless brought under control.

Most patients begin to improve at once if they are given proper care, particularly plenty of rest and good food. If drugs or medicines or other treatments are given at the same time, people are likely to discount the value of the food and the rest and give all the credit to the other treatments.

HIGHLIGHTS FROM LATEST BOOKS

Fire Ships Used to Turn Battle

From "Flying Colors" in the trilogy, "Captain Horatio Hornblower," by C. S. Forester (Little, Brown, $2.75), also containing "Beat to Quarters" and "Ship of the Line." These are extraordinary exciting stories of the British sailing ships during the Napoleonic era.

From tuberculosis has dropped from 97 per 100,000 population in 1920 to 54 per cent per 100,000 population in 1937. Here quite certainly we are making steady progress.

Napoleonic era.

Hornblower choked with emotion and excitement as his imagination called up the details of what would be going on in the English ships—the leadsmen chanting the soundings with disciplined steadiness, the heave of the ship to the defending crash of the broadside, the battle lanterns glowing dimly in the smoke of the lower decks, the sequent and rattle of the tracks as the guns were run up again, the steady orders of the officers in charge of sections of guns, the quiet voice of the captain addressing the helmsman. He leaned far over the parapet in the darkness, peering down into the bay. A whiff of smoke came to his nostrils, sharply distinct from the cold powder smoke which was drifting by from the guns.

They had lit the furnaces for heating shot, but the commandant would be a fool if he allowed his guns to fire red-hot shot in these conditions. French ships were as inflammable as English ones, and just as likely to be hit in close battle like this.

Then his grip tightened on the stone-work of the parapet, and he stared and stared again with aching eyes toward what had attracted his notice. It was the latest, most subdued little red glow in the distance.

The English had brought in fire ships in the wake of their fighting squadron. A squadron at anchor like this was the best possible target for a fire ship. . . . The red glow suddenly increased. . . . still brighter it grew as the few daring spirits who remained on board flung open hatches and gunports to increase the draught. . . . At once the sparkle of gunfire in the other French ships began to die away as the crews were called from their guns to deal with the drifting menace.

A Yankee was on a Christmas walking tour in Scotland. Snow had fallen and he was struggling along a narrow road when he met a Highlander.

"I guess, friend, I am sure lost!" he said plaintively.

Scott: "Is there a reward out for ye?"

American: "None."

Scott: "Well, ye're still lost."

There will be no war in Europe. You can bank on that—James Wilson, adviser to International Labor Organization at Geneva.

The Touch of the Master's Hand

"Twas battered and scarred; and the auctioneer thought it hardly worth his while to spend much time on the old violin. But he held it up with a smile. "What am I offered good folks?" he cried. "Who'll start the bidding for me? A dollar, one dollar, now who'll make it two?" "Two dollars! Now who'll make it three?" "Three dollars once, three dollars twice, Fair warning — and no more!" From the room far back a gray haired man came forward and picked up the violin. Then he carefully dusted the old violin. And tightened the loosened strings. Then played a melody soft and sweet as a caroling angel's song. The music ceased; and the auctioneer in a voice that was clear but low, said, "What am I bid for the old violin?" And he held it up with a bow. "One hundred dollars! And who'll make it two?" "Two hundred! And now make it three. Three hundred once, three hundred twice, And going — and gone!" said he. The people cheered; but some of them said, "We don't quite understand what changed the price?" Came the quick reply, "And there's many a soul all out of tune, And battered and scarred by sin. That's auctioned off to a foolish world much like the old violin. A mess of pottage: a glass of wine; A game, and he passes on. He's going once, he's going twice; He's gone, he's almost gone!" But the Master comes; and the foolish world can never quite understand The worth of a soul, and the change that is wrought. By the touch of the Master's hand. Repeated by request.

Christian Church.

The Junior-Senior High P. T. A. will hold its May meeting at 3:30 Thursday afternoon at the high school. A full attendance is urged. Installation of officers will feature the business period.

Mrs. James L. Jamison left Tuesday for a visit with relatives in Little Rock.

Mr. and Mrs. Lloyd Kinard were Sunday guests of Mr. Kinard's parents, Mr. and Mrs. H. M. Kinard in Junction City, Ark.

On Saturday afternoon a representative group of art-minded people assembled at the home of Mrs. R. A. Boyett on S. Main Street to hear a lecture on the old masters by Mrs. Gus Haynes. Mrs. Haynes held the attention of the audience with most interesting facts relating to painting and the world's most famous paintings, and reviewed the lives and works of three of the Masters, Sir Joshua Reynolds, Romney and Gainsborough, demonstrating her lecture with copies of the most famous paintings of each. Following the lecture the group had the pleasure of a visit over the upstairs studio, and seeing the work of the pupils of Mrs. Boyett. Two very pleasing features of the afternoon's entertainment were vocal solos by two of Mrs. Boyett's music pupils, Master Alfred Morsani, and Master Arch Moore Ellington.

Mr. and Mrs. Emond White and little daughter, Cherry spent the week end with relatives and friends in Little Rock.

Mrs. D. S. Newton of Little Rock is the guest of her mother Mrs. W. W. Duckett.

The regular monthly meeting of the Women's Missionary Society of the First Methodist church was held at three o'clock Monday afternoon at the church with Mrs. Stith Davenport presiding. The meeting opened with hymn singing followed by Litany prayer. A set helpful devotion was brought by Mrs. Ralph Routhon, who used as her theme, "What Do Ye More "Than Others." In her treatment of her subject, Mrs. Routhon presented the views as given by ten different members of the church. During the business period, the Zone meeting was announced for Thursday at Blevins. The Alma Kyles Circle presented the program, which was led by Mrs. Clifford Franks who gave an article on "Home Missions in the South." Two vocal selections were contributed by Mrs. Kory-Ralph Routhon, Mrs. Joe Laster brought an article on the "McDonald French Mission School at Houma, La." The program closed with Mrs. Allison Buckley telling of the work of the Virginia K. Johnson in Dallas, Tex., followed with prayer by Mrs. John Arnold.

Music—God is its author, and not man; he laid the keynote of all harmonies; he planned all perfect combinations, and he made us so that we could hear and understand.

As its contribution toward the observance of National Music Week, the Madrigal club will give a musical program, with dance specialties at the city auditorium at 8 o'clock, Tuesday evening. The public is cordially invited.

Mrs. Horace Whitten of Blevins and Mrs. Dolphus Whitten entertained at a ten Saturday afternoon from 2 until 6 at the home of the latter in honor of Mrs. Dolphus Whitten Jr., the former Miss Marie Braden of Little Rock before her marriage on May 1. Receiving with the Mesdames Whitten were Mrs. J. M. Braden of Little Rock, mother of the honoree, Mrs. Dale Wilcox and Mrs. Kenneth L. Spore. Miss Frances Snyder was in charge of the guest book. The dining room table was covered with a lace cloth and was centered with a crystal bowl of pink roses. Pink candles burned in crystal holders at either end of the table. The house was decorated with numerous bouquets of pink and white roses and pink candles burned throughout the afternoon. At the punch bowl were the Mesdames Marion Smith and Sara Ann Holland. The Mesdames Louise Capps and Hazel Guffey presided at the table. Seventy-five guests called during the afternoon.

Mrs. Paul Anderson is visiting her parents and friends in Broken Bow, Okla., this week.

Tasty Tales From Talkietown—Metro Exec Told Off—Praise Fiddler's Breathing

HOLLYWOOD—C. Aubrey Smith, 75 and very British, lolled in a big chair on the set of "Five Came Back" and carefully read a newspaper. He looked like an old gentleman in a club lounge, and sounded like one, too, as he made "fch-tch" sounds of concern and now and then addressed some remark to nobody in particular. "Alarming situation on the continent," he grumbled. "Bad—bad! . . . I get their back up before this. . . A firm hand—that's what it takes. . . Freight-lift mess! By gad, it looks like the time has come!"

Soon Director John Farrow called for a rehearsal and Smith ambled over to the camera. Someone glanced at the newspaper the actor had been reading. It was a London Times, three weeks old.

Pat Called Kettle Black Billy Grady, a Metro talent executive, tells it on himself—how he ducked out of his office door, which opened right on a narrow studio street, and came within inches of being run down by a company limousine. Somebody yelled "Look out!" and there was a squeal of brakes.

Afterward, he realized that he had been at fault, but just then Grady was so startled that he gave the driver an awful bawling out. After some more colorful adjectives, he called the man at the wheel "stupid and dumb." The driver just sat there and took it without offering any defense. Then, as he slipped the big car into gear, he looked at Grady and said: "And you're the guy who fired Denna Durbin because she wasn't worth 50 bucks a week!"

No Noise—They Liked Him Leader of the recording orchestra at 20th-Fox is a violinist named Louis Kaufman. Before coming to Hollywood he played concerts in the east and in Europe, and in his spare time he's still in demand for solo work on the air.

One evening while Kaufman was playing for a broadcast, his wife sat in the control room with some radio engineers who didn't know her. She noticed that the technicians were enthusiastic about her husband's playing and finally asked what they liked best about it.

"Mostly his breathing," said one of them. "You see, he has to stand right up to the mike; yet we can't hear his breathing. And another thing—there aren't any troublesome crackling noises from his stiff shirt front. That Kaufman's a fine musician!"

Title Change Thwarted Parrots The frequent, last-minute title changes on pictures are a sore trial to the publicity and advertising specialists. They'll work for months building up campaigns, stunts and catchphrases using the name of the feature, and then see their efforts wasted when the name is switched just before release.

Probably, though, there's never been anything more disappointing than the title change for one of the Mae West pictures. Throughout production it had been called "It Ain't No Sin," and one of the geniuses of exploitation had a great idea to plug it.

He got 50 parrots—some rented and some bought outright. A trainer was engaged, and his job was to teach the birds to say, "It ain't no sin—it's no sin."

The parrots were to be sent around the country and put into the lobbies of big theaters a couple of weeks before the West picture was to release there. Prizes also were posted for owners of parrots who could teach their birds to say "It ain't no sin" with the most clarity and enthusiasm.

So the 50 parrot stooges were trained, and preparations were made to ship them around the country. Then, from the front office, came a pink memo-to-all-departments. "The Mae West picture," it said, "will be released under the title, 'She Done Him Wrong!'"

Rev. Hammond has been active in the work of the local and state organization of the American Legion. He served in 1937 as Post Commander of Leslie Huddleston Post No. 12, leading the post in a record breaking membership drive.

He was elected last year to a second term as State Chaplain of the legion, having served as previous term in this capacity in 1927. He served in 1938 as district chairman for the Boy Scout organization in Hope and Hempstead county and is at present a member of the executive board of the Caddo Area Council. In January of this year he was elected president of the Arkansas Council of Ministers of the Christian church.

Rev. and Mrs. Hammond left early Tuesday morning for Stuttgart, to attend the sessions of the state convention of the Christian churches of Arkansas. They will visit a foster daughter at Malvern en route and will spend the night with friends at Pine Bluff. They will return to their pastoral duties here on Saturday, to make plans for the vacation given them by the church board at its Monday night's meeting.

Sees Adolph Hitler

formed before Der Fuehrer recently. He has been visiting theaters in which farces and skits are given. He has seen several performances of Franz Lehár's "Merry Widow." He has repeatedly visited the club house of the artists and chatted amiably with such stars of screen and stage as Zarah Leander, Emil Jennings, Leni Riefenstahl, Doran Weick and Leonore Ulrich.

After finishing the draft of his memoirs, "You see, he has to stand right up to the mike; yet we can't hear his breathing. And another thing—there aren't any troublesome crackling noises from his stiff shirt front. That Kaufman's a fine musician!"

Feeling himself an Austrian again, he appears to have fallen heir to Hapsburg dreams and aspirations. The virtual annexation of Bohemia and Moravia in March, 1939, was justified on the grounds that these lands once were German crown lands. The contemporary student of history remembers mentous reply to President Roosevelt's plea for peace, Hitler relaxed by going to the Hetropole (in a tuxedo instead of a uniform) to watch Mifflin Verne perform again.

Hapsburg Attributes In 1933, social life was dull at the capital. President von Hindenburg was aging, and few and far between were the dinners and receptions given at the German "White House." And over at the Chancellery, Bachelor Hitler was so engrossed in tasks of state that old party comrades considered themselves lucky if they were asked to stay for the daily luncheon round-table over which their Fuehrer presided.

The four months of 1939 have seen a succession of dinners and receptions and parties and musicales in the splendid new Reich's Chancellery, a stately building constructed after Hitler's own heart and expressive of Der Fuehrer's conception of German importance and grandeur. But Adolf Hitler not only has become more Viennese. Strange as it may sound, he has taken on the attributes of a family upon which he never loses an opportunity of heaping scorn—the Hapsburgs.

When Hitler took over in 1933, it was considered almost an insult to Der Fuehrer to speak of him as an Austrian. Ardent Nazis went out of their way to explain that he was Austrian merely by the accident of birth; that in reality he was German through and through, more like the Prussian Frederick the Great than anybody else.

From the moment that Austria was joined to Germany, Hitler was joined to Germany. Hitler himself said again and again that he was supremely happy to have brought his home back into the Reich. His followers followed him as having longed for years to bring his native land into the authoritative state of all Germans.

Austria in His Heart Feeling himself an Austrian again, he appears to have fallen heir to Hapsburg dreams and aspirations. The virtual annexation of Bohemia and Moravia in March, 1939, was justified on the grounds that these lands once were German crown lands. The contemporary student of history remembers them as parts of the Austro-Hungarian Empire. Slovakia was placed under German protection. It, too, had been a part of the Hapsburg empire. Hungary has been drawn so completely into the German economic and military orbit that it may be regarded as a satellite of Greater Germany.

The "clarification" of the Polish-German situation, now in progress, refers not only to sections of Pomerania and Pomerellen once a part of Germany, but also to sections of Silesia that once were Austrian.

If Hitler keeps on adding warlike success to success, the old Austro-Hungarian empire of the Hapsburgs will form the core of the new Nazi Third Reich.

Hitler's expanding heart has opened a chamber marked "Austria" next to that marked "Germany."

Pro Grid League in South Talked

Baseball Parks Would Be Used As Sites for Games

BIRMINGHAM, Ala. (AP)—S. A. Godman, representative of the National Professional Football Association, said here Monday night plans were gathering momentum for a deep south professional football league.

The circuit would include cities in Georgia, Alabama, Tennessee, Louisiana and Texas.

Operators of baseball clubs in the Southern Association met here Monday to confer with Godman on the proposal that they finance the league, using their baseball parks for games.

Southern Association owners who discussed the plan were Ed Norton, Birmingham; Tom Watkins, Memphis; Larry Gilbert, Nashville, representing Owner Fay Murray, and Earl Mann, Atlanta.

Godman said plans provided these cities, with Chattanooga and New Orleans, provided the framework for an eight-club football circuit.

Two more members would be drawn from Montgomery, Ala.; Jackson, Miss. Fort Worth and Dallas, Texas. Knoxville and Little Rock appeared definitely out of the proposal, Godman said.

The PAYOFF

By HARRY GRAYSON
NEA Service Sports Editor

NEW YORK.—Ray Blades doesn't know much about the National League.

The new manager of the St. Louis Cardinals hasn't been in it since 1932.

He relies a lot on the advice of Mike Gonzales and Buzz Wares, two of the smartest coaches in baseball.

Blades demands positive proof, but once he has it, he makes up his mind in a hurry.

The old artilleryman figures it should be a close race in the National League, and you gather that he doesn't think much of the clubs he has seen to date, when he adds "chiefly because it is always a close race."

"But I'll know more about the race when I've seen it," asserts the cautious old outfielder and leadoff man.

The matter-of-fact Blades points out that the Red Birds might get some place if they could correct the habit of giving the enemy five outs in an inning.

His big problem is shortstop. Joe Orango got so he couldn't hit the broad side of a barn.

Lynn Myers also turned out to be an All-American out.

And it doesn't look like Frank Crespi, the incumbent, will tear down the fences.

Shortstop Orango is Big Disappointment.

Orango is the big disappointment. Bill Killefer, who managed the San Francisco cable car operator in California, said he only had to correct a habit of hitting up on the ball to be an outstanding star.

Older heads in the St. Louis organization hailed him as the finest potential infield prospect since the great Rogers Hornsby broke in.

But in Blades' opinion, neither Orango, Myers nor Crespi is a first-class shortstop in any respect.

Blades tells you frankly that he doesn't know what he is going to do about the shortstopping situation. He may use Jimmy Brown, now playing second base, at shortstop and return Stu Martin to the keystone. That appears to be the only solution.

The Cardinals' pitching has been good enough, although Bob Weiland has not been impressive and Paul Dean doesn't look right as yet. Blades is not worried about Weiland, and the manager hopes warm weather will help Daffy Dean, who insists that his arm doesn't hurt.

Warneke is Key Man of the Pitching Staff.

Warneke has started off at a pace that might well lead a club to a pennant. When the New York Giants made the first run of the year to be scored off the former Chicago Cub the other afternoon, he had hung up 21 2/3 scoreless innings. And that run was unearned.

Curt Davis has looked good. So has young Bob Bowman.

Yet the Red Birds could use the pitching help expected from Southpaw Weiland and Dean.

The club has plenty of speed. A capable shortstop easily could give the St. Louis Cardinals the momentum required to come down in front in the current field of National League selling platters.

Factory consumption of corn oil in the United States increased from 42,819,000 pounds in 1931 to 72,770,000 lbs. in 1938.

SERIAL STORY BORDER ADVENTURE

BY OREN ARNOLD
COPYRIGHT, 1939, NEA SERVICE, INC.

Yesterday the Border Patrol moves out to catch Barro, and Betty waits at the radio station for word. Then suddenly she leaves and hails a taxi.

CHAPTER XXIX

SHERIDAN STARR was young.

But he and Hope Kildare had been assigned many weeks earlier to "get" Luis Barro, and so on this night the district chief ordered Sherry himself to take full command, directing even the older officers. It was not an unusual situation.

"You gentlemen understand that this is not likely to be easy," young Sheridan Starr of the United States Border Patrol was saying. "It is practically certain that we shall have to fight."

"Naturally," said a fellow officer, one of 35 men assembled.

"We are almost certain they'll be of New Channel Crossing with in the next three or four hours. We have inside information about that. We were signalled that the cavalcade had already started. But on baseback, Barro's force necessarily will move much more slowly than we have moved in cars. He does not even have a lead."

"Have any idea about how many of them to expect, Mr. Starr?" one man, a veteran in the service, asked.

"Yes, sir, a hundred at least, perhaps a few more."

"Whew!"

"That's what I'm trying to make clear—it isn't just a case of our stepping out to say 'Hands up!' Or a case where two or three aliens decide to shoot a little and we have to bat down their ears. This almost surely will amount to a battle, with the numerical odds against us three to one, so here's my idea of how to do it, and I've been thinking about it hard. New Channel Crossing is two miles down the river from this point where we are now. If we go any closer in cars, or even on foot, we stand a good chance of being seen by Barro's spies on this side. If spies do see us, they'll darn sure signal across to Barro. Now, Barro probably will be bold enough with 100 armed men to try to force his way over anyhow, and then again he might not be. He's tricky. So we can't just go to our side of New Channel Crossing and wait for him, you see."

"Then how will we manage it?" asked another officer.

"Well, the river isn't more than neck deep anywhere along here, at this season. There are tules and willows growing, and some rocks, along the shore. I think we can get right in the water about here, wade silently downstream—clinging near the American shore—and come out of the water there where the river dammed up its old channel and made a new one. Understand?"

"There's quite a bit of brush, larger rocks, and such stuff on New Channel Island proper," one man remarked.

"Barro's men would be protected there in event of fighting. On our side of the river the land has been cleared and left clean for quite a ways."

"Exactly!" Sheridan answered.

"That's why I say we have to work a little trickery of our own. Now here's the point—"

THE night had been favorable for smugglers at 8 p. m., and Luis Barro had observed that with satisfaction. Most of the sky was clouded, and when the earth did catch a glimpse of it the moon shone only as a negligible curved line.

But by 10 o'clock nature had diabolically joined the American forces, Barro noted, cursing. Clouds had settled down beyond the mountains as if to sleep the night through. Stars had become forgettable lanterns. Murky haze at the ground level had disappeared.

"Is no matter," he snapped at Gonzales, his assistant and interpreter. "No matter it was full moon, even. We have strength to-night. We send the estranjeritos over as planned. I like the chance to see gringo officers shot down before we leave anyway, eh Jose?"

"Si, Don Luis. But I am anxious to be gone."

"We shall hurry. We have a fast car all ready. We have steamship tickets even. We have plenty money. Tonight we start, and in two days we shall be on the ocean for grand trip, hah!"

"It is good," agreed Jose Gonzales.

"Now, you and I—we do not cross the river tonight, we stay always on the Mexican side. Los federales cannot cross the international boundary. It is strict law. The boundary line is down the center of the stream, as they well know. If something has slipped and they should be waiting for us, they would have to be on the other side, and would be only six or eight, maybe 10, anyway. I have never known more than 12 Border Patrol officers to be in one group. And we have big number tonight."

Barro was keenly alert. His eyes had scanned points beyond the Rio Grande in America for any light signal of warning that his spies might give, but he had seen none. He approached the water edge with field glasses trained. Anxious riders started into the water at once. Elation swelled in Barro. The American shore was clear for at least half a mile in each direction. His aliens could cross unmolested, Barro smiled.

In that moment a rifle shot cracked the clear night air along the Rio.

"ALTO!" a voice shouted. Then others—"Los federales, aqui ALTO!"

The shot, and the formal commands to halt, came not from in front of the aliens, but from three positions behind them!

"Si, senior. It will be easy."

Barro halted his cavalcade about a mile from the river. Several of the riders, especially some women who had never ridden a horse before and who had been in dire straits at this night adventure, had begun muttering in complaint. Barro's interpreters and assistants were forced to give them a few final words of encouragement.

"It is a few minutes now until you are in the United States," Barro promised them. "Then your troubles will be over, for there is the land where everybody get rich and have no worry."

He had led them to believe, ever since his spotters first contacted the aliens, that through his influence entrance to America was safe and easy, and residence there was almost utopian once they were actually in. He did not, of course, mention that any alien can be arrested in America and promptly deported, no matter how he has slipped in. Deportation can follow days, months, or even years after entry.

"The river where we cross is no deeper than a horse's knees," Barro went on. "You could even wade across on foot, easy. Just be quiet and ride right on eastward. Nothing will bother you. And anyway you have guns."

A very definite but silent tension crept over the entire personnel of the cavalcade as they approached the water, Barro and Gonzales leading. Only the sound of the animals—hooofs on stones, reins rattling, an occasional snort or a clamping of bits—marked the progress of the column.

"Here is the old river channel, dry," Barro pointed out to Gonzales, whispering, as they rode on across it. "The river now is eastward a short distance."

Nudists are nuts. They're people who need some emotional outlet and picked the wrong hobby.—Roxanne, snappily show girl, former wife of fighter Kingfish Levinsky.

site is not expecting it.

Mother Spits Trouble

Her mother came in at noon. And already Mrs. Adams was a nervous wreck. She had called to Henry every five minutes. "Henry, are you there?" And Henry always was right on the porch or in the yard.

Mother saw things. She had noticed them before. She herself had raised six children. She had held her peace for months, because she thought it best. But now she could see that Mary was getting beyond herself with the worry and responsibility of one child.

Before she did the dishes, Mary called out to Henry. "Don't go off the sidewalk. Stay right there and be sure you don't touch Mrs. Blank's flowers."

Henry hadn't thought of touching Mrs. Blank's flowers but it was a good idea. He crossed the line and smelled a pansy. He touched a pansy. He sat down beside the pansy-bed and stared at the little blue and yellow faces.

Mrs. Blank came out and said, "Why, Henry, do you like my flowers? Here, I'll give you a few to take home." So she pulled half a dozen pansies and Henry took them home.

"Mary nearly collapsed. 'I knew it. I told you not to touch those flowers. The minute I turn my back you are into mischief.'"

Must Trust Child

And this was her mother's chance. "You are worrying yourself to death about the best boy that ever lived, my dear," said she. "You can't get over the idea that he cannot think, and lacks judgment."

"What if he had half a dozen? You would soon learn that most children, even at Henry's age, have pretty good sense. He will go to kindergarten in the fall. Then what will you do when he is out of earshot?"

"But you won't think him safe, even. Not if you keep on. Learn to trust him, and stop frowning!"

Good advice indeed.

Give Child Credit for Some Sense

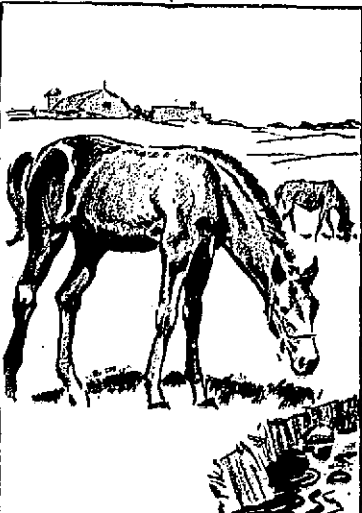

There is more to the "Johnny don't" than meets the eye. True, a little boy often manages to get into more trouble in a minute than Dead-End Dick could think up in a year. But how much is mother's own worried mind. That is the question.

Mrs. Adams wakes feeling as though a large goose egg was nesting in her brain. Instead of looking forward to a new day with confidence and enthusiasm, here she is dreading every hour until Henry's bedtime.

She cannot let the child out of her sight for an instant. He is five years old, or almost, and the strain is telling. She even has to lie down in his room when he takes his short nap, for she fears he won't stay in bed and might get the scissors or spill her ink. He never has touched the scissors or the ink, but then he might, just when

TALE OF THE TURF

No. 5—The Blue Grass Region

When the settlers found pasturage of the limestone area and the climate ideal, they imported the best types available.

Louisville improved its Oakland Course to attract owners from other states. Kentuckians were heartbroken when the Tennessee horse, Wagner, twice outran Grey Eagle, king of the Blue Grass, in four-mile heats, the first time on Jan. 1, 1839.—NEXT: Boston.

Virginians and Carolinians who settled Kentucky and Tennessee during the last quarter of the 18th century took good horses with them. Blooded stallions and mares were brought to Kentucky in return for cattle, hogs and mules driven to eastern and southern markets.

Henry Clay was active in the Lexington Association. In 1828 Lexington meets became the most important in the west.

Phillies Rally to Whip Reds, 8 to 7

Vander Meer Is Knocked Out of Box by Prothro's Team

PHILADELPHIA.—(AP)—Those fighting Phillies came up with a five-run rally in the eighth inning Monday to knock Johnny Vander Meer out of the box and beat the first place Cincinnati Reds, 8 to 7.

The veteran Chuck Klein, pinch hitting for Pitcher Max Butcher, hit the center field wall for a triple with the bases full and then scored the winning run on Legrant Scott's double to left.

Frank McCormick, first up for the Reds in the pinch, hit a homer, but Relief Pitcher Walter Back got Elyne Lombardi, Harry Craft and Wally Berger in order to end the game.

Mother: "Did I see you kissing young Allen last night?"

Phyllis: "Well, mother, he told me he had just lost an uncle, and I felt sorry for him."

Mother: "If I know anything about that young man he won't have a relative left in a week's time."
